Uncle Sam's mail clerks will not b worried this year about a load of Christmas gifts for Dan Coleman, the popular comedian with Harry Hastings' show at the Gayety Theater this week. The reason is that Coleman already has received his Christmas package, a travel-worn bag of war curies from a fighting friend

This bag of relics of the greatest war of history is labeled "Do not open until Christmas." Coleman, mindful of the honor agreement supposed to accompany such gifts, has, not touched the strings that bind to-fether the collection of novelties from his soldier pal. In a letter the comedian was told that German helmets, fresh from the that German neimets, from from the hattlefield, hayonet points dropped by the Huns in their precipitate flight, pleces of equipment used by the Laiser's troops, and papers picked up on the battlefield are included in the package from over there.

Two incidents in connection with "perce day," November 11, Coleman wiff remember as long as he lives. One was his receipt of a questionnaire from the War Department. The only relative in the war two days be-fore the armistice was signed.
